~~In naming William F. Raborn Jr.~~
to head the Central Intelligence Agency, President Johnson chose a Texan who has distinguished himself in war and in peace. Raborn, who retired from the Navy in 1963 as a vice-admiral and the deputy chief of naval operations for research, won the Silver Star in combat actions in the Pacific during World War II. After the war, he supervised the Navy's ballistic missile program, which developed the Polaris sub missile. He has shown himself to be equal to the most difficult and demanding job.

And that description pretty well fits the working conditions faced by the director of the CIA.
